

SPECIAL FREE SCREENING

OF THE PILOT EPISODE OF

Ronny Osofsky, owner Ronnybrook Farm

Credit: Gravy Pictures

Saturday
February 11, 2012
6:30 - 9 pm
Olin Hall • Bard College

The Big Table is a six-part documentary series about food, family and preserving a way of life. This pilot episode features Hudson Valley Bounty member, RonnyBrook Farm. After the screening, viewers will hear from the The Big Table production team, Ronnybrook owners Ronny and Rick Osofsky and other experts on how the simple choice to eat a product that is locally produced weaves a thread from you to the farmer.

"The Big Table, episode 1, is the real thing! Not a dry documentary, but an engaging and evocative portrait of a family and a (regrettably) dying métier. The story flows seamlessly, and Megan Wetherall inspires trust as an on-camera guide into this special world. I can't wait to see the rest of the series."

—Colman Andrews, Co-founder and former editor-in-chief of Saveur; Editorial Director of thedailymeal.com

HUDSON VALLEY
BOUNTY

www.hudsonvalleybounty.com

This screening was made possible through the support and help of The Bard Center for Civic Engagement, Bard Office of Sustainability, the Trustee Leader Scholars Program, The Office of Alumni/ae Affairs and Chartwells Dining Services at Bard College and Center for Environmental Policy.